tropical ecosystems are different in important ways from those of temperate regions they are a major reservoir of plant and animal biodiversity and play important roles in global climate regulation and biogeochemical cycling they are also under great threat due to the conversion of tropical ecosystems to other uses thus in the context of global change it is crucial to understand how environmental factors biogeographic patterns and land use changes interact to influence the structure and function of microbial communities in these ecosystems the contributions to this research topic showcase the current knowledge regarding microbial ecology in tropical ecosystems identify many challenges and questions that remain to be addressed and open up new horizons in our understanding of the environmental and anthropological factors controlling microbial communities in these important ecosystems calfano provides an examination of the pressures faced by muslims often considered political and social outsiders in western nations especially in the united states identity is a complex concept especially when considering the role that group attachments play in affecting how one sees her his role in the political environment of their country of residence perhaps the greatest tension in this regard is felt by those who are often considered outsiders in their home country despite significant ties to their nation though citizens and second generation residents in many cases american muslims face a combination of suspicion government scrutiny and social segregation in the united states despite significant education and economic assimilation in america the crux of the investigation advanced here centres on how group influence emotions and religious interpretation contribute to the political orientation and behaviour of a national sample of muslims living in the american context a compelling explanation as to how members of an ostracized political group marshal the motivation to push through suspicion to become fully engaged political actors this book has wide relevance and will be of interest to scholars researching muslims and political participation across the fields of political science history sociology and religion a major new look at the evolution of mating decisions in organisms from protozoans to humans the popular consensus on mate choice has long been that females select mates likely to pass good genes to offspring in mate choice gil rosenthal overturns much of this conventional wisdom providing the first synthesis of the topic in more than three decades and drawing from a wide range of fields including animal behavior evolutionary biology social psychology neuroscience and economics rosenthal argues that good genes play a relatively minor role in shaping mate choice decisions and demonstrates how mate choice is influenced by genetic factors environmental effects and social interactions looking at diverse organisms from protozoans to humans rosenthal explores how factors beyond the hunt for good genes combine to produce an endless array of preferences among species and individuals he explains how mating decisions originate from structural constraints on perception and from nonsexual functions and how single organisms benefit or lose from their choices both the origin of species and their fusion through hybridization are strongly influenced by direct selection on preferences in sexual and nonsexual contexts rosenthal broadens the traditional scope of mate choice research to encompass not just animal behavior and behavioral ecology but also neurobiology the social sciences and other areas focusing on mate choice mechanisms rather than the traits they target mate choice offers a groundbreaking perspective on the proximate and ultimate forces determining the evolutionary fate of species and populations during the 1950s amid increased attention to the problems facing cities such as racial disparities in housing education and economic conditions tense community police relations and underrepresentation of minority groups local governments developed an interest in human relations in the wake of the shocking 1965 watts uprising a new authority was created the los angeles city human relations commission today such commissions exist all over the united states charged with addressing such tasks as fighting racial discrimination and improving fair housing access brian calfano and valerie martinez ebers examine the history and current efforts of human relations commissions in promoting positive intergroup outcomes and enforcing antidiscrimination laws drawing on a wide range of theories and methods from political science social psychology and public administration they assess policy approaches successes and failures in four cities the book sheds light on the advantages and disadvantages of different commission types and considers the stresses and expectations placed on commission staff in carrying out difficult agendas in highly charged political contexts calfano and martinez ebers suggest that the path to full inclusion is fraught with complications but that human rights commissions provide guidance as to how disparate groups can be brought together to forge a common purpose the first book to examine these widely occurring yet understudied political bodies human relations commissions is relevant to a range of urban policy issues of interest to both academics and practitioners
