this report concludes that the government must employ a basket of measures covering all tenures of housing if sufficient finance is ever to be available to tackle the country's housing crisis for decades successive governments have failed to deliver sufficient homes to meet demand the country faces a significant housing shortfall and the financial crisis has amplified the problem 232 000 new households are forming each year in england and yet in 2011 fewer than 110 000 new homes were completed the committee sets out four key areas for action which taken together could go a long way to raising the finance needed to meet the housing shortfall large scale investment from institutions and pension funds changes to the financing of housing associations including a new role for the historic grant on their balance sheets greater financial freedoms for local authorities new and innovative models including a massive expansion of self build housing the 40bn decent homes programme has had a positive effect on the living conditions of most social housing tenants this report finds but the government has failed to invest enough resources in the parallel programme to improve homes occupied by vulnerable people in the private sector the government must also clarify future funding it is still unclear how the elimination of the remaining backlog of disrepair around 3 per cent of social homes will be funded and how much will be available to maintain standards in the future the government must prevent another backlog of disrepair from building up after the current programme comes to an end in 2010 carbon emissions reduction targets mean that the entire uk housing stock must be made more energy efficient the decent homes standard has an important part to play and should be updated to enable this the use of arm s length management organisations almos to manage council housing has led to improved standards and better planning though not all councils were able to follow this model the decent homes standard remains a low benchmark however the target for decency applied to private housing should be retained and strengthened by creating a national indicator for private sector accommodation a clear long term target should be set at a national level to bring all private sector homes not just those occupied by vulnerable people up to the decent homes standard
