this project document explored the houston northwest seventh day adventist church s lack of evangelistic strategies and leadership development in addition to a community demographical surveys and a spiritual health assessment evaluation a series of contemporary evangelistic methods and strategies were deemed the best antidote for the problems of the church this study also took into account the church's demographics and their culture of origin, religious convictions, racial makeup, traditional practices, and economic conditions in order to develop these methods and strategies. This project used the examples set forth by the Old Testament model on revitalized worship, the example of King Hezekiah, the New Testament model on leadership, and the example of Jesus Christ to his disciples. This mandate notes that once leaders are led by the Holy Spirit to bring the people of God back to worship, they must proclaim the advent of Jesus Christ. In addition, leaders should, as Jesus did, teach members how to become steward leaders; they should teach members on how to use their spiritual gifts, talents, and skills to proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ. Finally, church leaders should develop members into disciples and church leaders themselves.

Imagine an organizational model for church leadership that enables the entire team to unleash their full potential, the joy and vigor coming from a collective strength, intelligence, and skill in the community of leaders. Not only does this bring greater potency, but it also yields better results for your ministry. What would it be like to see this kind of healthy leadership reproduced into the second, third, and fourth generation on multiple strands, leveraging the metaphor of the starfish and the spider? Rob Wegner, Lance Ford, and Alan Hirsch show how to take a close look at your church's organizational structure and how to adapt instead of simply adopting a certain kind of structural approach. How can churches function without a rigid central authority, making them nimbler in reacting to external forces? How can seeding starfish networks inside today's churches prepare the church of tomorrow to be agile while maintaining accountability? To be effective, the starfish and the spirit are about creating a culture where church leaders view themselves as curators of a community on a mission, not the source of certainty for every question and project. It's about creating a team of humble leaders in the middle of the church, not at the top, leaders who naturally reproduce multiple generations of leaders from the middle out.

No sooner have they mastered the basics than students of theology can quickly find themselves overwhelmed. They are bombarded with claim and counter claim as soon as they want to tackle anything topical. The contentious subjects tend to be the historical Jesus, gender, and sexuality, or the atonement. Other subjects might be less contentious but attract an astonishing excess of literature. Take the vast literature tackling the subject of the church, for instance, or the bloated body of tomes on various aspects of pneumatology. This book tries to provide the bewildered and intimidated student with a primer that is at once introductory and incisive, approachable and informative. It will help those training for ministry to recover their fascination for the subject of theology and how it could apply to their future ministry.

Bruce Barton's book The Man Nobody Knows challenges readers to rediscover Jesus Christ as a visionary leader and role model for contemporary times through Barton's portrayal of Jesus as a successful businessman and leader. Readers are inspired to embody principles of visionary leadership, effective communication, and ethical conduct in their personal and professional lives by embracing Barton's timeless insights. Individuals can cultivate leadership excellence, foster positive change, and inspire others to achieve success with purpose, integrity, and compassion.
