this book engages with a controversial issue namely the establishment of penal colonies and concentration camps in imperial spaces which have informed ongoing debates on the repressive practices of colonial rule and popular resistance against it the contributors offer a reassessment of the history of politically motivated incarceration based upon a multi disciplinary perspective in a global imperial setting during the twentieth century the introduction and seven chapters engage with comparative and transnational perspectives on political persecution forced confinement and colonial rule in british french german belgian and portuguese dominions in africa asia oceania and latin america addressing political incarceration s global imperial dimensions they focus upon the organisation strategies narratives and practices associated with political internment in africa angola tanzania rhodesia south africa latin america french guyana and the pacific region new caledonia penal legislation policies of convict transport and political imprisonment resettlement prison regimes resistance and liberation struggles counter insurgency prisoner agency and prisons as cultural spaces and of memory are discussed here for different time periods from the mid 1800s to the late twentieth century the chapters build upon the ongoing debate on political incarceration in the empire and the remarkable dynamic scientific research witnessed over the last decades as a result they provide novel insights into the nature of legal systems colonial discourse memory racial segregation and persecution prisoners narratives of practices of punishment and incarceration and human rights abuses in imperial spaces the chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal of imperial and commonwealth history the editors have also written an original conclusion to the present volume a study of the role of political imprisonment in the modern world in regimes ranging from communist to fascist to colonial to democratic in her innovative study of human rights discourse lena khor takes up the prevailing concern by scholars who charge that the globalization of human rights discourse is becoming yet another form of cultural legal and political imperialism imposed from above by an international human rights regime based in the global north to counter these charges she argues for a paradigmatic shift away from human rights as a hegemonic immutable and ill defined entity toward one that recognizes human rights as a social construct comprised of language and of language use she proposes a new theoretical framework based on a global discourse network of human rights supporting her model with case studies that examine the words and actions of witnesses to genocide paul rusesabagina and humanitarian organizations doctors without borders she also analyzes the language of texts such as michael ondatje s anil s ghost khor s idea of a globally networked structure of human rights discourse enables actors textual and human who tap into or are linked into this rapidly globalizing system of networks to increase their power as speaking subjects and in so doing to influence the range of acceptable meanings and practices of human rights in the cultural sphere khor s book is a unique and important contribution to the study of human rights in the humanities that revitalizes viable notions of agency and liberatory network power in fields that have been dominated by negative visions of human capacity and moral action the constitution and 9 11 provides a comprehensive striking and disturbing analysis of executive misuse of power that is made all the more compelling by placing it in a rich and fascinating historical contest no better book is available for placing post 9 11 government actions in the matrix of history and explaining how executive power has degraded the constitution and citizen rights william g weaver back cover the central concern of the book is the impact of global terror networks and state counterterrorism on twentieth century fiction a unique contribution of this book is the comparative approach as opposed to the single author focus of most of the edited collections on terrorism in literature
