economists broadly define financial asset price bubbles as episodes in which prices rise with notable rapidity and depart from historically established asset valuation multiples and relationships financial economists have for decades attempted to study and interpret bubbles through the prisms of rational expectations efficient markets and equilibrium arbitrage and capital asset pricing models but they have not made much if any progress toward a consistent and reliable theory that explains how and why bubbles and crashes evolve and can also be defined measured and compared this book develops a new and different approach that is based on the central notion that bubbles and crashes reflect urgent short side rationing which means that as such extreme conditions unfold considerations of quantities owned or not owned begin to displace considerations of price illustrates bayesian theory and application through a series of exercises in question and answer format modelling trends and cycles in economic time series has a long history with the use of linear trends and moving averages forming the basic tool kit of economists until the 1970s several developments in econometrics then led to an overhaul of the techniques used to extract trends and cycles from time series in this second edition terence mills expands on the research in the area of trends and cycles over the last almost two decades to highlight to students and researchers the variety of techniques and the considerations that underpin their choice for modelling trends and cycles this report summarizes the results of a project which investigated the time series interrelationships between crime drug use police and arrests in new york city we use monthly data from 1970 through 1990 for new york city we plot the individual time series for five different non drug crimes arrest rates for these crimes drug deaths number of police officers and drug arrests in new york city we find that drug usage as proxied by drug deaths increased from the mid 1980 s to about 1988 1989 at the same time felony drug arrests increased substantially during the mid 1980 s there were increases in murders assaults and motor vehicle thefts robberies increased in the later 1980s and burglaries declined throughout the 1980s arrest rates and total arrests for non drug crimes did not decline during this period of increased drug arrests in a multivariate analysis we found that the three property crimes investigated robberies burglaries and motor vehicle thefts increased when there were unexpected increases in drug usage we did not find such a relationship between drug use and murders or assaults holding constant arrest rates and police in addition we found evidence of police deterrence either directly or through arrests of property related and assault offenses but not for murders thus in a time series approach we are able to find a causal relationship between drug usage and property related felonies
