usan is a papuan language in this monograph on the grammatical structures of usan and their function the author shows the unique features of this language how speakers can exploit certain principles for communicative purposes how the language reflects their physical environment uniqueness can only be shown in the context of communality with other languages this monograph offers numerous occasions to observe similarities and differences between usan and other language those that can be called papuan in particular becoming effective hunters of manipulative communicative moves is far from an easy capacity to develop this book aims at offering a guide to the most dangerous traps of deceptive language as triggered by implicit communication strategies such as presupposition implicature topicalization and vague expressions a look at different contexts of language use highlights some of the most remarkable implications of using indirect speech and of how it affects the correct comprehension of a message within the remit of communication and pragmatics studies this work marks an advancement in the direction of delving into the linguistic manifestations of manipulative discourse its most common contexts of use and the educational paths that can be undertaken to master it in everyday interactions what is the mind what is the relationship between brain and mind these are common questions but what is the brain is a rare question in both the neurosciences and philosophy the reason for this may lie in the brain itself is there a brain problem in this fresh and innovative book georg northoff demonstrates that there is in fact a brain problem he argues that our brain can only be understood when its empirical functions are directly related to the modes of acquiring knowledge our epistemic abilities and inabilities drawing on the latest neuroscientific data and philosophical theories he provides an empirical epistemic definition of the brain northoff reveals the basic conceptual confusion about the relationship between mind and brain that has so obstinately been lingering in both neuroscience and philosophy he subsequently develops an alternative framework where the integration of the brain within body and environment is central this novel approach plunges the reader into the depths of our own brain the philosophy of the brain that emerges opens the door to a fascinating world of new findings that explore the mind and its relationship to our very human brain series a this collective volume contains a selection of research contributions presented at the 30th deutscher romanistentag german conference on romance languages and literatures in 2007 in vienna in the section mood and modality in romance the romance languages studied here include portuguese italian spanish romanian catalan and french all contributions thematically explore the status and importance of modality and mood and their reciprocal relationships with reference to theoretical approaches public discourse constitutes the language environment of a town or a city which forms part of the social environment of a country or a region based on extensive first hand data collected from public places mass media and the internet this monograph attempts critical pragmatic studies of public discourse in the contemporary chinese context by applying pragmatic theories and analytical instruments to the analysis of the data including business names advertisements public signs and notices and news the book showcases such discursive practices as personalization and subjectivization and reveals such social problems as unhealthy social mentalities pragmatic traps suspect discrimination and vulgarity it exemplifies a way of combining the critical discourse analysis cda approach and the pragmatic approach with a clear focus on the pragmatic issues this book will not only be a necessary addition to the academic discipline of pragmatics in general and critical pragmatics in particular but also lay bare the problems existing in the use of public discourse and suggest several ways to improve such use while it addresses the chinese data only the proposed analyses may contribute to international readers understanding of public discourse in contemporary china and serve as a reference for similar researches worldwide this book proposes a radically evolutionary approach to biolinguistics that consists in considering human language as a form of species specific intelligence entirely embodied in the corporeal structures of homo sapiens the book starts with a historical reconstruction of two opposing biolinguistic models the chomskian biolinguistic model cbm and the darwinian biolinguistic model dbm the second part compares the two models and develops into a complete reconsideration of the traditional biolinguistic issues in an evolutionary perspective highlighting their potential influence on the paradigm of biologically oriented cognitive science the third part formulates the philosophical evolutionary and experimental basis of an extended theory of linguistic performativity within a naturalistic perspective of pragmatics of verbal language the book proposes a model in which the continuity between human and non human primates is linked to the gradual development of the articulatory and neurocerebral structures and to a kind of prelinguistic pragmatics which characterizes the common nature of social learning in contrast grammatical semantic and pragmatic skills that mark the learning of historical natural languages are seen as a rapid acceleration of cultural evolution the book makes clear that this acceleration will not necessarily favour the long term adaptations for homo sapiens this book which has been written for linguists and philosophers working in the field of semantics deals with presupposition and its dependence on context
