extract this study begun in mid 1974 looks at what has been happening to the cotton textile industry of eec member countries to their imports and exports of cotton textiles and to consumer demand the study was not designed to forecast the end of the current textile and economic slow down in the community or to project future levels of mill use of cotton rather emphasis is put on the fact that the community will continue to be a large market for raw cotton during the first half of the nineteenth century the united states emerged as a major producer of cotton textiles this paper argues that the expansion of domestic textile production is best understood as a path dependent process that was initiated by the protection provided by the embargo act of 1807 and the war of 1812 this initial period of protection ended abruptly in 1815 with the conclusion of the war and the resumption of british imports but the political climate had been irreversibly changed by the temporary expansion of the industry after 1815 nascent manufacturers sought to protect the investments they had made by lobbying congress their efforts had an important impact on the provisions concerning cotton textiles in the tariff bill of 1816 and during the 1820s manufacturers won increasingly strong protection culminating in the passage of the tariff of abominations in 1828
