the internment of enemy aliens by the british government in two world wars remains largely hidden from history british historians have treated the subject if at all as a mere footnote to the main narrative of britain at war in the great war britain interned some 30 000 german nationals most of whom had been long term residents in fact internment brought little discernible benefit but cruelly damaged lives and livelihoods breaking up families and disrupting social networks in may 1940 under the threat of imminent invasion the british government interned some 28 000 germans and austrians mainly jewish refugees from the third reich it was a measure which provoked lively criticism not least in parliament where one mp called the internment of refugees totally un english the present volume seeks to shed more light on this still submerged historical episode adopting an interdisciplinary approach to explore hitherto under researched aspects including the historiography of internment the internment of women deportation to canada and culture in internment camps including such notable events as the internment revue what is life

it was felt by both jewish and non jewish circles that any growth in refugee numbers would lead to antisemitism fear of enemy aliens led to mass internment in 1940 of which a large proportion were jews immigration policy in regard to palestine was restrictive also using the excuse of possible infiltration of enemy aliens contends that wartime antisemitism has to be seen as an outgrowth of xenophobia heightened by war tensions and as a factor of psychological distancing from the victims discusses the december 1942 declaration by anthony eden on behalf of the allied countries condemning the extermination of european jewry and the resolve to punish the perpetrators public reaction was strong in britain but sympathy for europe s jews bore little fruit in effective action
