art historian david lubin examines the work of six nineteenth century american artists to show how their paintings both embraced and resisted dominant social values lubin argues that artists such as George Ingham and Lily Martin Spencer were aware of the underlying social conflicts of their time and that their work reflected the nation's ambivalence toward domesticity, its conflicting ideas about child rearing, its racial disharmony, and many other issues central to the formation of modern America from publisher description

Rathmell's book, biased in favor of the five Marlow brothers, has long been out of print. Robert K. Dearment has sifted through the evidence and presents an objective annotated edition. Readers can judge for themselves were the Marlows as law-abiding as Rathmell claims.

This book investigates the history of writing as a cultural practice in a variety of contexts and periods. It analyses the rituals and practices determining intimate or ordinary writing as well as bureaucratic and religious writing from the inscribed images of pre-literate societies to the democratization of writing in the modern era. Access to writing technology and its public and private uses are examined in ten studies presented by leading historians of scribal culture from seven countries. The book investigates the uses of writing in non-alphabetical as well as alphabetical script in societies ranging from Native America and ancient Korea to modern Europe. The authors emphasise the material characteristics of writing and in so doing they pose questions about the definition of writing itself. Drawing on expertise in various disciplines, they give an up-to-date account of the current state of knowledge in a field at the forefront of book history.
