throughout the past three decades east asia has seen more peace and stability than at any time since the opium wars of 1839 1841 during this period china has rapidly emerged as a major regional power averaging over nine percent economic growth per year since the introduction of its market reforms in 1978 foreign businesses have flocked to invest in china and chinese exports have begun to flood the world china is modernizing its military has joined numerous regional and international institutions and plays an increasingly visible role in international politics in response to this growth other states in east asia have moved to strengthen their military economic and diplomatic relations with china but why have these countries accommodated rather than balanced china s rise david c kang believes certain preferences and beliefs are responsible for maintaining stability in east asia kang s research shows how east asian states have grown closer to china with little evidence that the region is rupturing rising powers present opportunities as well as threats and the economic benefits and military threat china poses for its regional neighbors are both potentially huge however east asian states see substantially more advantage than danger in china s rise making the region more stable not less furthermore although east asian states do not unequivocally welcome china in all areas they are willing to defer judgment regarding what china wants and what its role in east asia will become they believe that a strong china stabilizes east asia while a weak china tempts other states to try to control the region many scholars downplay the role of ideas and suggest that a rising china will be a destabilizing force in the region but kang s provocative argument reveals the flaws in contemporary views of china and the international relations of east asia and offers a new understanding of the importance of sound u s policy in the region histories of east asia traditionally emphasize china and japan and neglect korea and vietnam essentially 20th century east asia is re written into the past as though china and japan was always the core of east asian development this is not at all how east asia developed chinese prehistoric cultures became historic in the 18th century b c japan was not part of east asia for over 2300 more years by studying periods of chinese unity and disunity and their effects on chinas neighbors korea and vietnam a distinct culture zone east asia gradually emerged and slowly included japan the main elements of east asiacultural social political philosophical religious and linguistic were derived from china but the others were not minor replicas of china each was unique its people ethnically distinct from china and each other its native language and linguistic blend with chinese also unique korea and vietnam resisted chinese colonization but adopted and adapted advance chinese elements to their own needs emerging later japan underwent wholesale adoption of tang chinas advances replicated in the 19th century when japan was the first east asian country to modernize spanning some thirty eight centuries from the 18th century b c to 2012 a d this diversity with common elements derived from china is a major theme of this work it is often overlooked by those who prefer general views based on surface impressions to more complex realities the former often lead to mistakes the latter become the basis for more sound understanding after all these four countries and people share the eastern end of the eurasian continent yet each countrys geographic situation is also unique as the twenty first century continues to unfold this new approach to east asia should help to produce clearer and more accurate understanding of this important world region
