pioneering investigation into relationship between physical sense of taste and taste as a term denoting judgement in early modern england

this volume uses the art of rome to help us understand the radical historical break between the fundamental ancient pre supposition that there is a natural world or cosmos situating human life and the equally fundamental modern emphasis on human imagination and its creative power rome s unique art history reveals a different side of the battle between ancients and moderns than that usually raised as an issue in the history of science and philosophy the book traces the idea of a cosmos in pre modern art in rome from the reception of greek art in the roman republic to the construction of the pantheon to early christian art and architecture it then sketches the disappearance of the presupposition of a cosmos in the high renaissance and baroque periods as creativity became a new ideal through discussions of the art and architecture that defines proto modern rome from michelangelo s terribilita in the sistine chapel caravaggio s realism baroque illusionism the infinities of borromini s architecture to the grand tour s representations of ruins through an interpretation of such major issues and works this book shows how modern art liberates us while leaving us feeling estranged from our grounding in the natural world the book will be of interest to scholars working in art history architectural history classics philosophy and early modern history and culture
