an in depth look at the men and women who call themselves real life super heroes dressed like heroes from comic books and action movies real life super heroes are out there they dress up at night fight crime save people and some of them even have secret identities are they ordinary mild mannered citizens or are they larger than life characters determined to fight crime risking life and limb to defend victims of violence and injustice and why do some choose to reveal their true identities while others prefer to remain anonymous guided by a reporter's instincts and a thrill seeking nature journalist nadia fezzani sets out in search of the secret lives of these men and women who put themselves in harm's way to protect their fellow human beings through interviews and patrols with these heroes she discovers what lies behind their activities after facing gunmen and other dangers on patrol fezzani has crafted a psychologically fascinating look at real life super heroes and their world authenticity the dominant cultural value of the baby boom generation became central to presidential campaigns in the late 20th century beginning in 1976 americans elected six presidents whose campaigns represented evolving standards of authenticity interacting with the media and their publics these successful presidential candidates structured their campaigns around projecting authentic images and connecting with voters as one of us in the process they rewrote the political playbook redefined presidentiality and changed the terms of the national political discourse this book is predicated on the assumption that it is worth knowing why henrichs tarasenkova argues against a long tradition of scholars about how best to represent luke's christology when read against the backdrop of ancient ways of constructing personal identity key texts in the lukan narrative demonstrate that luke indirectly characterizes jesus as the one god of israel together with yhwh henrichs tarasenkova employs a narrative approach that takes into consideration recent studies of narrative and history and enables her to construct characters of yhwh and jesus within the lukan narrative she employs richard bauckham's concept of divine identity that she evaluates against her study of how one might speak of personal identity in the greco-roman world she engages in close reading of key texts to demonstrate how luke speaks of yhwh as god in order to demonstrate that luke acts upholds a traditional jewish view that only the god of israel is the one living god and to eliminate false expectations for how luke should speak of jesus as god this analysis establishes how luke binds jesus' identity to the divine identity of yhwh and concludes that the lukan narrative in fact does portray jesus as god when it shows that jesus shares yhwh's divine identity in a political moment when social panics over literature are at their peak dangerous fictions is a mind-expanding treatise on the nature of fictional stories as cultural battlegrounds for power fictional stories have long held an uncanny power over hearts and minds especially those of young people in dangerous fictions lyta gold traces arguments both historical and contemporary that have labeled fiction as dark immoral frightening or poisonous within each she asks how dangerous is fiction really and what about it provokes waves of moral panic and even censorship gold argues that any panic about art is largely a disguised panic about power there have been versions of these same fights over fiction for centuries by exposing fiction as a social danger and a battleground of immediate public concern we can see what each side really wants the right to shape the future of a world deeply in flux and a distraction from more pressing material concerns about money access and the hard work of politics from novels about people driven insane by reading novels to copaganda tv shows that influence how viewers regard the police gold uses her signature wit research and fearless commentary to point readers toward a more substantial question fiction may be dangerous to us but aren't we also dangerous to it in grassroots campaigns the grass isn t always green or natural in today s chaotic world where the multiplication of information sources creates competing narratives credibility is the key to winning the war of ideas this is the reason why governments and corporations resort to astroturfing creation of ostensibly grassroots movements set up to advance political agendas and commercial campaigns the democratization of information and polarization of politics offer a perfect storm fake politics tells the stories of how this practice has transformed political activism into a veiled lobbying effort by the rich and the powerful through a series of vignettes involving the tea party oil industry big tobacco big data and news media this book will explore the similarities and differences between various campaigns that appeared as grassroots but in reality were lobbying efforts fueled by governments corporations major industries and religious institutions the process named for the artificial grass fields at football stadiums and high schools across the country became so prevalent in the last two decades that it now sits at a tipping point in the era of fake news and alternative facts with the truth well on its way to becoming indistinguishable from fabrication what can the past of astroturfing tell us about the future of grassroots activism this book argues that the personal voice which is often disparaged in journalism teaching is and always has been a prevalent form of journalism paradoxically the aim of objective reporters is often to be known for a distinctive voice this personal voice is becoming increasingly visible in the context of the confessional society after receiving his discharge from a two year stint in the army during the Korean War, Spencer Corbin moves to Southern California, gets a job and spends his free time going to bars and movies. Not long after he arrives he begins having a series of related dreams about a beautiful woman called Lavender. He falls in love with her because she is safe. Spencer has no interest in marriage nor steady girlfriend. One Saturday morning two beautiful women, Stefanie and Joanna, who are lesbians, move into a bungalow next to his. Stefanie is a free lance painter. Spencer asks her to paint a portrait of Lavender from his description of her. Soon Spencer falls in love with Stefanie but regards her as with Lavender, a safe situation because she is in a relationship with Joanna. Ultimately the relationship between Stefanie and Joanna cools and Stefanie falls in love with Spencer. However, Spencer never becomes aware of that and does not declare his love for her. Stefanie, who has never ever had any feelings for a man, does not declare her love for Spencer because she does not understand those feelings and because she believes he might eventually dump her as he has done with other women. He has always made it very clear to her that he is not interested in anything smacking of a permanent relationship with a woman. The Lavender dreams continue unabated throughout the novel and after a while even Stefanie begins having Lavender dreams. No matter who dreams them, the same three people, Lavender, Stefanie, and Spencer, are always in them. Sometimes Spencer finds it difficult to separate his dreams from the real world in which he lives. Toward the end of the novel, Spencer turns his wasteful life around and thanks in large part to his love for Stefanie, pursues and obtains his Ph.D. in history from USC. He had obtained a masters degree in history prior to his army service. Then he is hired as a professor at USC. This is the happiest time of his life and he finally decides to tell Stefanie that he loves her regardless of how she might take the news. But something intervenes to delay that confession. In the end, do the two worlds, that of the dreams and that of the real existence, merge as one or is one world shed in deference to the other?

Metrospiritual the geography of church planting is about church planting in the city. There is an outpouring of new expressions of church being started throughout metro areas across North America. Where are these new churches being started? Maybe a more subterranean question is why? Why are churches being started where they are and why is there a bias towards one part of the city and an overall neglect of other parts? Metrospiritual explores these questions and more as it builds off of recent research and surveys of hundreds of church planters in seven large cities in the United States and Canada. There is a deeper look at pivotal issues such as gentrification, the creative class, community transformation, urban renewal, and the role new churches play in all of these.

although historians frequently use memoirs as source material too often they confine such usage to the anecdotal and there is little methodological literature regarding the genre s possibilities and limitations this study articulates an approach to using memoirs as instruments of historical understanding jennifer jensen wallach applies these principles to a body of memoirs about life in the american south during jim crow segregation including works by zora neale hurston willie morris lillian smith henry louis gates jr william alexander percy and richard wright wallach argues that the field of autobiography studies which is currently dominated by literary critics needs a new theoretical framework that allows historians too to benefit from the interpretation of life writing her most provocative claim is that due to the aesthetic power of literary language skilled creative writers are uniquely positioned to capture the complexities of another time and another place through techniques such as metaphor and irony memoirists collectively give their readers an empathetic understanding of life during the era of segregation although these reminiscences bear certain similarities it becomes clear that the south as it was remembered by each is hardly the same place
