Living the Christian life was born from the realization that the church of today has fallen into a tremendous state of depravity. There have been many complaints and criticism against Christianity and Christians, and with just cause. Those who profess Christ as their saviour have not parted from their sins but continued to live in it with even more gusto. They profess Christ as the Lord but they do not live in dependence and submission to the Lordship of Christ. Christians of today profess to believe the Word of God as infallible, God-inspired, and the standard of a Christian life, but their very lives are contradictory to their profession. From before the beginning of this book until the last page, the prayer of my heart was that God would direct my words and give me insight and understanding. The depravity of the church of today is a tremendous burden for me because it brings great dishonour to the name of God. The more I searched and studied Scripture in writing this book, the more I realized how far modern-day Christians have fallen and deviated from the will of God. The chapter I enjoyed writing about the most is crucified with Christ, as that is the core of a life truly being lived in accordance with the will of God and to His glory and honour. Christianity starts with the cross of Christ and revolves around it for all eternity.
