this volume comprises national reports on migration and migration law from 17 countries representing all continents the vast majority of these are countries of immigration which means they face specific challenges in terms of managing migratory flows that are increasingly linked with climate change and scarce natural resources worldwide and they need to find viable ways to integrate humanitarian migration unlike so many recent publications in the field of international migration law this book brings together reports on diverse countries that are rarely regarded as part of one and the same picture depicting globalized migration in the contemporary era that to a large extent challenges state sovereignty the contributions delineate the legal regimes that individual states are continually developing and modifying with a view to managing and controlling access of individual persons to their respective territories they also show how the restrictive measures that states resort to in the event of failure to manage migration could have a lasting legal impact the general report preceding the country reports provides a comparative overview of the national reports and is divided into two parts the first more technical in nature addresses the classic questions relating to admission to and residence in a country the second more reflective section examines the relationship between laws and migration in a wider and multidisciplinary perspective to allow a robust comparison the country reports all follow a similarly wide ranging structure to the extent possible they also cover the historical sociological and demographic factors that help explain legal regimes and migratory flows in each country each country report includes analyses of recent legislative developments and delicate questions that are still awaiting adequate legal responses as well as perspectives for the future

This is an ethnographic account of the transnational caregiving experiences and practices of Australian migrants and refugees caring for their elderly parents in Europe, the Middle East, Asia, and New Zealand. It describes how people respond to unprecedented mobility, both voluntary and forced, globalized job markets, and an ageing population.

Migration law has been a very controversial area over the past twenty years. The global movement of people and the plight of refugees have led to a series of controls on people entering into and remaining in Australia. The legislation containing the rules has been changed many times, and the courts have considered hundreds of cases in migration and refugee law in Australia. Cases and commentary extract the main principles of law and explain them so that the law can be understood. The book analyses the policy and moral considerations underpinning migration law and suggests an overarching framework for developing migration law and critiquing existing policies and practices. Migration and refugee law is also analysed through the lens of Australian and international human rights law and conventions. Immigration is expected to be one of the most important issues facing Australia this century. Informed debate will produce outcomes.

Core to the work is its thorough analysis of judge and tribunal-made laws that supplement and contextualise the laws made by Parliament and implemented by the immigration bureaucracy. This goes to the very heart of how we define the Australian nation.
