Why are so many types of inequality suddenly increasing? Should we be worried that we're moving into a second gilded age with unprecedented levels of income inequality? In this new collection David B. Grusky and Jasmine Hill present readings that lay bare the main changes in play, what's driving these changes, and what might be done to reverse them. This reader delivers the latest and most influential contributions on economic inequality, social mobility, educational inequality, racial and ethnic relations, and gender inequality. Readers will encounter pieces from top scholars in a variety of fields including Emmanuel Saez, economist UC Berkeley; Kathryn Edin, sociologist Johns Hopkins; Raj Chetty, economist Harvard; Florencia Torche, sociologist NYU; and Lucien Bebchuk, law Harvard. The readings spanning these fields are expertly excerpted to get readers quickly and immediately to the heart of the scholarship in each area. Grusky and Hill also provide a concise introduction to the key questions, allowing readers to quickly understand the main forces at work, the debates still in play, and what's still unknown. The resulting collection is a pitch-perfect introduction for undergraduates or anyone interested in learning why we're entering a new era of inequality and what can be done to change the tide.

How much would you spend to protect the environment? That's the starting and ending point for most mainstream economists when they talk about environmental issues, and that's part of the problem. In twenty-four engaging and informative articles, The Environment in Crisis offers progressive perspectives on the environment and debunks the myths broadcast by the business press and neoclassical economists. The book starts with a discussion of how mainstream economics shortchanges the environment, breaking down the murky science of cost-benefit
